

ANTI-TACHYCARDIA PACING METHODS AND DEVICES

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Improved methods and devices perform anti-tachycardia pacing (ATP) to convert a ventricular tachycardia (VT) to normal sinus rhythm. In one embodiment of the invention bi-ventricular (BV) ATP is employed. In this embodiment the right ventricle and left ventricle of a patient's heart are independently paced based on signals sensed in each chamber.

40045950 101901